

Trend of Modularity in Railway System

Masaru IWAMATSU

Modularity is the technique to set architecture to the relation among modules which are mechanical composition units and to separate an interface and a structure. The author investigated the significance and the value to introduce such technique into the railway system. The author reports the trend of modularity introduced railways system and related fields and states its development in the future.