

Recent Trend of Research and Development on Materials for Railway

Shunichi KUBO

The major contribution of the materials technology can be expected in the following fields : the improvement in safety and reliability of the railway vehicles and tracks, the evaluation and the control methods for railway environments such as noise and vibration, the innovation of maintenance technologies for structures, the reduction of railway vehicle energy consumption. This review introduces some of the recent results of research and development in these fields.